Dear Mr. Finberg,

Here are some answers to the optional questions you had asked for in SND's "Day of Design" project.

Page 1 on Feb. 10 is designed by the Graphics Editors and subject to the approval of the Managing Editor.

A budget meeting is held at 5 a.m. with our first-edition deadline at 9 a.m.

The Special Projects Coordinator designed the Special Report on "Stereotyping causes tension." We wanted the to show the variety and scope of the people interviewed. To accomplish this, we packaged three photographs, with refers to their profiles inside, on the cover.

Also, the Food Section was designed by the Layout Desk, which is comprised of the Graphics Editor, the Special Projects Coordinator, an A-3 layout editor and two artists.

The remaining sections were handled by the section editors and their assistants. We are in the process of changing this to get more visual input from the Layout Desk.

A recent addition to the Star-Bulletin is the Money Monday section. It provides consumer information to help readers use their money wisely. It covers everything from stocks to financial planning, bonds to art investments.

The weekly project was started Dec. 14, 1992.

Thank you for allowing the Star-Bulletin to participate in "A Day of Design." I am looking forward to seeing the results.

Sincerely,

Michael Rovner
Graphics Editor
